Karl Marx – On Mass Campaigning and Living Daily Life (1867)

By Karl Marx

Table of Contents

I. Living People’s Protests
II. Living Leaders
III. Simple Daily Life as Marx’s Life
IV. Working Out Pamphlets as Daily Militant Life.

Introduction
By Suneet Chopra

Here Marx argues for in fact a simple organizing which in our history of Communism in the world has been done often but as a handful of gatherings, Marx means just the opposite it can seem, as a joke, to organize the Paris Commune.

Recently in India, with Sirohi as a Trotskyist leader, we have accomplished a people being organised as people. As Marx calls it, just a free people assembling and collecting, in what seems like a mass people.

I mean organically express this.

II. Karl Marx

Organise the people, accomplish praxis.

I. A Simple Task to Accomplish

Simply organize the people, and do all that you can. It is any organizing of the people. But in line with the electoral vote.

II. A Simple Daily Life

I mean just be daily life and Jewish about daily life. I mean something like a militant proficient and radical clear-cut dogmatic leader.

III. Praxis will Prove this

Praxis then, the operations and dynamics of the working class will prove to be correct.

Engels edit this.

Friedrich Engels –

I. Mass and People as a Gathering
II. Party of the people
III. Daily Life as Simple Living Culture Instead of being organisers.
IV. Living Culture of Drinking Coffee and being a Cultural Superstructural Living Person